

Module name:	History of veterinary and deontology
ECTS:	2
Learning effects	Course outcomes:
Knowledge:	1	Student knows and understands English and Latin medical and veterinary nomenclature
	2	Student knows and understands code of ethics of veterinary surgeon and basic deontological issues
	3	Student knows and understands functioning of institutions related to veterinary activities and knows and understands the role of veterinary surgeon in society
Skills:	1	Student knows how to listen and answer in understandable language appropriate for the situation
	2	Student knows how to properly evaluate the responsibility of the veterinary surgeon in relation to animals and the environment
	3	Student knows how to understand the necessity of continuous education and professional development
Competences:	1	Student is prepared to comply with the principles of veterinary ethics and deontology and tolerant of other people
	2	Student is prepared to express opinions on various aspects of professional activity
	3	Student is prepared to deepen knowledge and improve professional skills
	4	Student is prepared to work in professional and territorial or local organisations
Objectives of the module required to obtain learning effects:	The course aims to present students with information concerning veterinary history, its development and achievements from Antiquity until today as well as instilling passion and pride for their future profession. Students also obtain essential information on professional ethics as well as rights and obligations of veterinary surgeon in contemporary professional and social life. Learning outcomes – gained skills and competencies: Ability to employ knowledge of history and achievements of veterinary medicine, familiarity with professional ethics as well as rights and obligations concerning practice of the veterinary surgeon profession, professional conduct according to principles of ethics and obligations of veterinary surgeon in the future.
Assessment methods:	Written test, an essay	